Description

Corciano, Umbria - Perugia: Complex of three apartments obtained from the restoration of an old medieval hamlet dating back to 1200, originally a watching tower placed on the borderline of an important Umbrian family's dukedom (to whom belonged famous personalities like leaders and high prelates). The tower became an important palace, borderline barracks, game reserve, horse relay station and dwelling for passers coming from Perugia. Bought in 1880 from the family of the current owners, it became a farm with silkworm cultivation. After that, the villa was transformed into a summer holiday home and the family started to dedicate herself to traditional cultures, as well as olives and grapes. A recent restoration of the annex adjacent to the main villa ended up by creating three apartments which are now offered for sale as described below.
